Germans Go North in March Through Belgium

BRUSSELS, August 11. — (Associated Press by Federal Wireless) — The main German army is making a northern movement from Liege and is now stretched out along the valley of the Ourthe, the river on which Liege lies. Two divisions of cavalry, the German advance, have reached the city of Tongres, some ten miles northwest of Liege, on the road to Hasselt.

The Belgians still hold their main Liege forts and there has been desperate fighting along the Belgian lines, where the defense has been strongly reinforced by French and British infantry and artillery. The reports from the front are that the allies have driven back the German attacks.

It is officially announced that the Germans have evacuated one fort at Liege, which has been reoccupied by the Belgians.

DISARRANGED GERMAN PLANS.

The resistance which the invaders have met with at Liege has disarranged all their plans, if the notes found on a captured German spy are to be believed. The German strategists had expected to occupy Brussels a week ago Sunday, within forty-eight hours of starting the Belgian invasion.

INVADERS ARE HUNGRY.

The prisoners being taken by the allies state that hunger exists in the German ranks, the commissary having proven unequal to the task imposed upon it. The main slaughter came when the attackers were advancing across the Ourthe river, the gunners in the fort having the exact range of the bridge and concentrating the fire on it when it was crowded with troops. The bridge was swept clean of men and demolished by the shells.
